GKN takes to the streets at the Berlin E-Prix:

Now a staple of the series, the FIA Formula E Championship returns to the German capital for another electrifying race this May.

The track has changed greatly over the seasons, reducing the number of turns and re-profiling the layout as the Formula E racers have become even quicker and more efficient.

The track is slightly wider than many of the other locations, leaving the drivers a little more margin for error. We are likely to see some extremely fast-paced racing here in Berlin. Be sure not to miss it!
